

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A mobile communication system comprises a plurality of transfer devices configured to transfer packets to a visited position of a mobile terminal, a plurality of connection management devices arranged in a network and configured to connect to the mobile terminal, and a mobile terminal including a detection unit configured to detect the transfer device, and a communication unit configured to connect to the connection management device, and transmit/receive packets to/from the transfer device detected by the detection unit via the connection management device.